Name: 13a-13b and 15a-15b Lowbourne

Grade: II Date Assigned 13/02/1985 Amended: 29/11/2018 Revoked:

Legal Description

Pair of houses, currently (2018) four flats. Mid- to late C19, with late-C20 and early-C21 alterations.

MATERIALS: The houses are constructed of ashlar fronts and stone rubble sides and rear, under a hipped slate roof. There are axial ashlar stacks with moulded capping and brick stacks to the rear. 15 Lowbourne has timber sash windows, whilst those to the front elevation of 13 Lowbourne have been replaced in uPVC. The rear additions are variously built of stone rubble, brick and timber.

PLAN: Pair of attached houses, each converted into ground- and first-floor flats; the internal layout was altered to some extent during the conversion.

EXTERIOR: The houses which are set back from the roadside are each of two storeys. They are in a simplified classical style with a stone plinth to 13 Lowbourne and deep eaves to the hipped roof. The principal (east) elevation of 13 Lowbourne is a symmetrical composition of three bays. It has rusticated quoins and a central six-panelled door and a fanlight with cast-iron fleur-de-lys ribs set in a rusticated surround with rusticated voussoirs to the round-arched head. To either side is a window in recessed panels. At first-floor level are three windows with stone cills. 15 Lowbourne is of two bays; the right-hand bay breaking forwards. It has an enclosed porch of timber and stone which is a later addition. Both the porch door and the main entrance door are late C20. To the right is a large casement window with margin lights and a vermiculated keystone. The first floor has two six-over-six sash windows, also with vermiculated keystones. The left return is blind. There are single- and two-storey additions to the rear which are of various dates and styles, and are built in a variety of materials and window types, including a horned sash, a round-headed window with ogee-shaped glazing bars and margin lights of coloured glass, and modern uPVC.

INTERIOR: Despite the conversion of each house into two apartments and the rear additions they largely retain their original arrangement of rooms. 13 Lowbourne has a central staircase with turned newels, stick balusters and a ramped handrail. The house retains some mid- to late-C19 four- and six-panel doors, and one of the ground-floor rooms contains a 1930s fireplace with tiled inset, a timber surround and overmantel. 15 Lowbourne also retains some mid- to late-C19 doors and a similar staircase to 13 Lowbourne and, although the balusters to the flight itself are missing, they are present on the galleried landing. There are some modern internal finishes to both houses.

SUBSIDIARY FEATURES: To the front is a stone rubble wall containing pedestrian entrances for each house. These have stone gate piers topped by pyramidal capping stones.

Legal Description

MATERIALS: constructed of squared rubble stone laid to course, with ashlar dressings. It has a Welsh slate tile roof with stone coped verges and ashlar stacks with moulded capping.

PLAN: a single-depth house with a central hallway and a room to either side. The rear extension provides a continuation of the hallway with a heated room to the south which provides access to the single-storey range to the rear, and a room to the north which has been divided into two.

EXTERIOR: the principal elevation (east) of the two-storey house is of three bays with a gable end stack with moulded capping to the north. The central, six-panel, entrance door has a rectangular fanlight above with intersecting tracery, beneath a stone open triangular pediment supported on brackets. To either side of the entrance is a six-over-six sash window with a plain ashlar architrave and stone cill. There are three matching sash windows to the first floor. To the rear (west) elevation there are two dormer windows with hipped roofs and a lateral chimney stack with a brick shaft. The ground and first floors are concealed by a two-storey extension of coursed rubble stone with a Welsh slate roof. To the ground floor are two top-hung, casement windows with glazing bars and a chamfered stone doorcase to the right, and three, top-hung, casement windows to the first floor. To the left is a single-storey range with a gabled roof. To its north side is a round window and a large rectangular window with plate glass.

INTERIOR: the entrance door leads to the hallway with a principal room to either side. The room to the right (north) has a plain stone fireplace with slight chamfering (the grate has been removed) and later applied timbers to the chimney breast. There is chamfered ceiling beam with no stops. The room to the left (south) of the hall has an early-C19 stone fireplace with ovolo moulding and square corner blocks with a cast-iron grate. Both rooms have decorative cornicing with foliate detailing, and the architraves to the doorways are moulded and have square corner blocks with a floral motif. There are four-panel doors throughout. The windows have moulded architraves and retain their window shutters. The C19 extension to the rear includes a room to the south with a tall, open fireplace. There is similar fireplace with a bread oven to the rear range which is accessed from this room. Both fireplaces have plain ashlar surrounds. The C19 staircase has square stick balusters, a moulded handrail and turned newel posts. To the two first-floor bedrooms at the front of the house are C19 cast-iron fireplaces, one within a plain stone surround. The staircase to the attic rooms has a plain handrail and appears to be a later insertion. The roof structure is partially visible to these rooms and comprises C19 principal rafters with trenched purlins.

The late-C20 conservatory to the rear is not of interest and is therefore excluded from the listing.

Legal Description

An C18 house which incorporates a formerly separate, late-C16/early-C17 range to the south and an attached C19 forge to the rear. C19 and C20 additions and alterations.

MATERIALS: 42 King Street is constructed of coursed rubble stone with ashlar quoins and dressings. It has a stone tiled roof to the front (east) and side (south) and a pantile roof to the rear (west). The range to the south has been re-fronted with coursed rubble stone. Its side elevation has brick to the ground floor and timber-framing with brick infill to the first floor. The chimney stacks to the rear and side are brick and there is a stone stack to the north gable.

PLAN: 42 King Street is a cross-passage house with a room to either side, and an incorporated late-C16/early-C17 range of one bay to the south. Attached to the rear of the south range is a former forge which has been extended to the west to form a garage. To the rear of the C18 house are C19 additions.

EXTERIOR: the principal elevation (east) is of two-storeys with a three-bay range to the right and the surviving single bay range of a late-C16/early-C17 building to the left. This earlier wing appears to have been re-fronted in stone in the late C20. To the ground floor are two late-C20 wooden sash windows beneath an oak lintel which spans the width of the bay and denotes the position of former double-doors. To the first floor is a sixteen-light casement window. The side (south) elevation is constructed of brick, laid in English garden wall bond to the ground floor, and timber-framing to the first floor with brick infill panels. There is a rendered gable towards the rear of this elevation, with a lateral brick stack to its left. The rear elevation is gabled, with the first-floor timber-framing concealed by the mono-pitch roof of the single-storey forge to the rear; the timber framing is visible within this building.

The front elevation of the C18 house is of three bays and has a central doorway within a stone surround, with a moulded canopy supported on stone corbels above. The door is late C20. It is flanked at ground and first floor by late-C20 wooden double-glazed sashes in the original openings. To the rear elevation there is a central dormer window and a two-storey C19 extension. To the left, is a single-storey gabled addition which is shared with 40 King Street.

INTERIOR: to the ground-floor of the late-C16/early-C17 range is a four-panelled ceiling of moulded oak beams with a carved central boss that has scallop shell, star, diamond and maple leaf motifs. There are mortice holes in the beam to the middle of the room indicating that there was formerly a partition wall here. There is a stone corner fireplace to the west end of the room with an oak bressumer. The two first-floor rooms have exposed timber-framed walls and jowl posts support the tie beam and wall plate. The roof is constructed of scissor-braced principal rafters and a ridge purlin and appears to be of late-C16/early-C17 date.

The interior of the C18 house has been remodelled in the C20, and most of the internal doors are late C20. The south wall of the cross passage has been removed and an arched opening in the south (left) wall of the left-hand room provides access into the earlier range which has been incorporated into 42 King Street. The fireplace to the rear wall of the left-hand room is late C20, while the fireplace to the room on the other side of the hall has been removed. The C18 winder staircase is in its original position. To the first floor is a C19 four-panelled door which provides access to the C19 winder staircase leading to the attic. In the attic, the principal rafters and trenched purlins are visible.

The interior of the former forge to the rear comprises a capped brick hearth and truncated brick stack.

SUBSIDIARY FEATURES: the late-C20 garage to the west of the forge is excluded from the listing.

Anglican parish church. Norman origins, late Medieval with extensive remodelling in 1845 by T.H. Wyatt. Ashlar, Welsh slate roof with coped verges and saddlestones. Plan: west tower, 5-bay nave with aisles, chancel with south side chapel, north porch. 4-stage rectangular west tower was moved from the crossing in 1845, corner buttresses and Perpendicular-arched door with hood mould having carved terminals, third stage has single lancet, fourth stage has cusped Perpendicular style blind arcading and 2-light window with louvres, string courses to third and fourth stages, battlemented chapel with one Perpendicular 3-light with hood mould, clerestory has three 3-light 4-centred arched windows and battlemented parapet. Lady chapel on south east side has three 4-light Perpendicular windows with hood moulds, and square headed door with moulded plinth raised over lintel, battlemented parapet and pinnacles. Chancel has corner buttresses, one with Medieval sundial and 2 and 3-light Perpendicular windows with hood moulds. North aisle of chancel has gabled C19 vestry with 3-light Perpendicular window, and one 4-light square-headed window to right. Door in moulded Perpendicular arch in north 2-storey porch, with 2-light trefoil-headed window to upper floor and statue of St. Michael in niche over door. North aisle same as south and with polygonal stair turret in angle of tower. Interior: Porch has tierceron star vault with bosses. 5-bay nave has C13 pointed arcade on cylindrical piers, late C19 pews and tall pointed arch to tower of 1845. C15 Lady Chapel refitted in 1909. Chancel has pointed arch and wooden barrel-vaulted ceiling, evidence of removed blind arcading and piscina on walls, 4-centred arches into Lady Chapel and vestry inserted in 1845. Fittings: fine carved limestone reredos of 1894 by Ponting, carved oak chancel screen also of 1894, choir stalls of 1881 and pulpit of 1906, some good late C19 stained glass in nave and chancel and glass by Ward and Hughes, 1884 and Kempe, 1897 in Lady Chapel. Good collection of memorial tablets includes early marble of 1612 to Ambrose Dautesey in chancel, signed tablet to Jacob Selfe of 1730 by Hoare in Lady Chapel and signed tablet to Thomas Smith of 1720 by Richard Broad of Box. On exterior north east corners of chancel and nave are 3 C18 cartouches. (N. Pevsner, The Buildings of England: Wiltshire, 1975. R. Gunnis, Dictionary of British Sculptors 1660-1851, 1951).
